

SUPPORT FOR YOUR TEAM

Before conversations escalate

As a school leader, this situation probably sounds all too familiar:

By the time difficult student or parent conversations reach your desk, it is often almost too late. You need to react quickly and put out fires. Meanwhile, the documentation is often incomplete.

WHAT TAKES UP TIME

- Limited time and a lack of structure
- Asking the same questions over and over
- Taking notes instead of being fully present
- Goals lose momentum and progress goes unseen
- Uncertainty about what went well and what could improve

WHAT TEACHERS GAIN

- ✓ Clear preparation and relevant questions
- ✓ Full presence in the conversation
- ✓ Automatic summaries and documentation
- ✓ Specific feedback on the conversation
- ✓ Relevant activities for lasting progress
